would gladly fight Britt in a back alley, or out behind a sand hill, or anywhere else, it only he could induce the Callfornian to meet him. He stood on the street corners in San Francisco and offered to fight Britt under any conditions that James might hold out for. People began to believe him.

Then Britt suddenly came to the front, anapped up Nelson's challenge, and made the match, insisting that the visuaer should take the entire purse.

Soon the fire-easing Dane and his soler manager began to backpedal. First there was a fuss over the referce. Soler and Nelson refused to accept dramp, the club official, They insisted the mild of the same of the pennant made. Britt proposed Jim Jeffries. The public wanted Jeffries, because he has a good reputation for honesty. Nolan finally spread to toss a coin for choice. Britt won, and named Jeff.

If Jeff had been less indifferent all might have gone well, for the Danes spannager might have found it hard to locate a loophole. But Jeff delayed his opaning to fan Francisco.

Sept. 7.—Not in the least dismayed by the two successive victories of Duffy's stars, Manager Ned Hanlon, of the Superbas, was determined to-day to take one game from the Quakers. Just before the warming up period he got his aggregation in the club-house and lectured them on their lack of stick work and brain playing, demonstrating to them that their lack of scientific play on the bases is responsible for their poor showing in the series here and their low position in the pennant race.

Bason pitched a game yesterday that ordinarily would win sight times out of tan, but Pitchese had one of his good days and Hanlon's men were utterly helpiess before his delivery, which was pussing at all times.
